Supporting Information to

Potent and Prolonged Hypoglycemic Activity of an Oral Insulin - Tat Mixture in Diabetic Mice

J. Manosroi¹,², T. Tangjai¹, R. G. Werner³, F. Götz ³, W. Manosroi⁴, A. Manosroi ¹,²

¹Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Faculty of Pharmacy, Chiang Mai University, Chiang Mai, Thailand

²Natural Products Research and Development Center (NPRDC), Science and Technology Research Institute (STRI), Chiang Mai University, Chiang Mai, Thailand

³Department of Microbial Genetics, Faculty of Biology, University of Tübingen, Tübingen, Germany

⁴Faculty of Medicine, Chiang Mai University, Chiang Mai, Thailand

Correspondence

Jiradej Manosroi

Department of Pharmaceutical Sciences, Faculty of Pharmacy, Chiang Mai University, Suthep road, Chiang Mai 50200, Thailand

Tel.: +66/53/894 806

Fax: +66/53/894 169

jiradej.manosroi8@gmail.com
Figure A  HPLC chromatogram of the standard insulin

Figure B  HPLC chromatogram of insulin after incubation with SGF without pepsin for 120 min
Figure C  HPLC chromatograms of insulin in the form of insulin - Tat mixture at initial a and after incubation with SGF for 10 min b

Figure D  HPLC chromatogram of insulin after incubation with SIF without trypsin for 120 min
Figure E  HPLC chromatograms of insulin in the form of insulin - Tat mixture at initial a and after incubation with SIF for 120 min b