Supporting Information

Exploratory Study on the Effectiveness of a Standardized Extract from Ageratina pichinchensis in Patients with Chronic Venous Leg Ulcers

Ofelia Romero-Cerecero, Alejandro Zamilpa-Álvarez, Enrique Jiménez-Ferrer, Jaime Tortoriello

Affiliation

Centro de Investigación Biomédica del Sur (CIBIS), Instituto Mexicano del Seguro Social (IMSS), Xochitepec, Morelos, México

Correspondence

Dr. Jaime Tortoriello

Centro de Investigación Biomédica del Sur (CIBIS)

Argentina Street No. 1

Xochitepec, Morelos C.P. 62790

México

Phone and Fax: +52/777/3612155

jtortora2@yahoo.es
Fig.1S Photographic records that show the following in chronological order (A = baseline situation; B = after 28 days; C = after 63 days; and D = after 78 days): venous-ulcer size, venous-ulcer localization, and venous-ulcer evolution in a patient with topically administered experimental treatment elaborated with an extract of A. pichinchensis.