Supporting Information

Arsenic Trioxide-Enhanced, Matrine-Induced Apoptosis in Multiple Myeloma Cell Lines
Qinghong Yu¹, Binhai Chen³, Xiang Zhang¹, WenBin Qian², Baodong Ye¹, Yuhong Zhou¹

Affiliation

¹Department of Hematology, The First Affiliated Hospital, Zhejiang Chinese Medical University, Hangzhou, ZheJiang, China
²Department of Hematology, Institute of Hematology, The First Affiliated Hospital, ZheJiang University College of Medicine, Hangzhou, ZheJiang, China
³Department of Oncology, The Second Affiliated Hospital, Zhejiang Chinese Medical University, Hangzhou, ZheJiang, China

Correspondence

Yuhong Zhou; Xiang Zhang
Department of Hematology, The First Affiliated Hospital
Zhejiang Chinese Medical University
Hangzhou 310006, ZheJiang
China
Tel: +86 571 866 20325
zyhblood@163.com; hillhardaway@126.com
Morphology of matrine (1.0 g/L), ATO (8 ug/mL), and combination therapy (matrine 1.0 g/L plus ATO 8 ug/mL) -induced apoptosis of RPMI8226 and U266 cell lines was detected by Hoechst 33258 staining. Apoptotic cells were observed in the matrine and ATO groups; the effect was enhanced in the combined group.